

Abstract

An FT-IR microscope is operated in association with a scanning spectrometer in such a way that incremental movement of the movable stage of the microscope is synchronized with the scans of the scanning spectrometer. This minimizes delays in processing time.